

Join us for a presentation & discussion by local union and climate justice activists on the new 2022 book by Martin Huber:

CLIMATE CHANGE AS CLASS WAR

A professor of geography at Syracuse University and frequent contributor to Jacobin, Huber provides a detailed critique of the climate movement's failure to look at the problem in class terms and the consequences of that failure.

A successful climate justice movement must be based on a mass working-class movement, with material demands that resonate with the everyday needs of a broad and diverse array of workers.

Sunday, July 24, 4:30 pm

The discussion will be followed by a membership meeting at which we discuss the launch of a new educational series for the public called False Solutions. We would love your input.
